

Insights: Publications

A Look at Five Cases at the International Trade Commission: Apple v. Qualcomm, Jurisdiction Issues, and Overlap with the FDA

IP Watchdog

July 18, 2019

Written by Aarti Shah

---

Case filings at the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), a popular venue for resolving intellectual property disputes, reached record levels in 2018, and 2019 appears likely to be another busy year. In fact, there have already been a number of important decisions, including one in Qualcomm's high-profile battle with Apple relating to the public interest, one making it clear that the ITC has jurisdiction over those only indirectly involved in infringement, and an opinion addressing the overlap between the ITC and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as well as the ITC's ability to police misleading advertising and labeling of pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, and dietary supplements.

Related People

---

Aarti Shah

t 202.481.9937

ashah@ktslaw.com