Samara Kohn focuses her practice on complex commercial litigation.

While attending University of Michigan Law School, Samara worked with the firm as a litigation summer associate in 2025 where she shadowed attorneys during court hearings, depositions, and client meetings, gaining exposure to litigation strategy, case management, and client advocacy across various practices. She served as a student attorney at the school's Pediatric Advocacy Clinic where she represented low-income families across a range of matters including special education, Medicaid, and family law, through client counseling and advocacy.

While attending Vanderbilt University, Samara majored in history and medicine, health and society.

Samara has basic knowledge of Spanish and Hebrew.
