

Insights: Publications

Supreme Court Says “Willfulness” Not Required to Recover Trademark Infringers’ Profits — What’s Next?

Law Week Colorado

June 22, 2020

Written by Andrea M. LaFrance

In Romag Fasteners, Inc. v. Fossil, Inc., the U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled unanimously that willful intent is not an absolute prerequisite to awarding an infringer's profits in a trademark infringement lawsuit.

Related People

Andrea M. LaFrance

t 303.607.3286

alafrance@ktslaw.com