

Insights: Publications

When a Forensic Exam of a Mobile Device May Be Warranted

LitSmart E-Discovery Blog

September 22, 2022

Written by Robert R. Adler

With the evolution of technology, electronic communications -- particularly text messages -- can often provide a treasure trove of evidence. While requests for email communications and collections from hard drives and networks are standard in today's litigation, a party's text messages, and collections from mobile devices are oftentimes overlooked. A narrowly tailored motion to compel forensic exam can be a valuable discovery tool to analyze the data on a party's mobile phone.

Related People

Robert R. Adler

t 704.338.5209

radler@ktslaw.com