Insights: Publications

Ex Parte Trademark Appeals to District Court — Lessons Learned from the Front Lines

ALM | Intellectual Property Strategist

OCTOBER 3, 2024 Written by Christopher P. Bussert

Although pursuit of an appeal to the Federal Circuit may under some circumstances prove to be quicker and less expensive, appeals to district courts are becoming increasingly attractive given recent changes in the law and USPTO practice in defending these actions.

To read the full article from Kilpatrick's Chris Bussert, please click here.

Related People

Christopher P. Bussert
t 404.815.6545
cbussert@ktslaw.com