Bree Black Horse: I Am Here

Guest, Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton LLP Sidebars Podcast

NOVEMBER 3, 2021

Bree Black Horse grew up steeped in Tribal traditions, culture, and art. Regularly attending powwows – and performing in them – she listened to tribal elders as they discussed the issues and concerns facing Native American communities. Realizing that many of these matters have legal aspects, she decided that she could best serve her community by becoming a lawyer. In this episode, Bree tells us how her career journey is inextricably linked to the unimaginable suffering that Native Americans have endured since the United States was formed and how her people's history forged her determination to conquer adversity, stand tall, and be counted.
