

Insights: Publications

A Collaboration Like No Other

Georgia State University College of Law Blog

October 31, 2017

I never thought going to law school would also entail going to medical school. Generally, it is either one beast or the other, right? So, when we were told during HeLP clinic orientation that we'd be expected to attend classes at Morehouse School of Medicine, I was definitely nervous. Though I was excited to meet the medical students, I was also very curious to see how it would all work. Where would our collaboration take us, would we all mesh well, is this going to be like 1L orientation all over again? Really the questions were endless in my mind. Now, with half a semester of clinic behind me, I have realized that the med-law student partnership is perhaps the most brilliant concept anyone has ever come up with.