Construction & Infrastructure

Parker Lewton is a litigator and pragmatist who focuses his practice on construction and infrastructure projects and government contracting. He represents a wide variety of clients in the construction industry. Parker has experience litigating public and private cases across the United States including matters before the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, federal district courts, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, state courts, Boards of Contract Appeals, and private tribunals. Clients appreciate his organization, ability to simplify the complex, and skill for developing trial records.

Prior to joining the firm, Parker was an associate in the Atlanta, Georgia office of a national construction and government contract law firm where he concentrated his practice on construction litigation and government contracting. Parker also worked previously for a major New York law firm, as well as a global partnership based in Washington, D.C. While attending law school, Parker studied government contracts and served as Senior Articles Editor of the Public Contract Law Journal. He also served as a law clerk for Chief Judge Somers, former Chair of the U.S. Civilian Board of Contract Appeals, where he drafted judicial decisions on various issues related to federal contracting.

Clients benefit from Parker's highly-developed, clear, and concise writing skills. In 2016, his publication on federal procurement won first place in a national writing competition hosted by the American Bar Association Section of Public Contract Law.

Parker was recognized as one of the "Best Lawyers: Ones to Watch" in 2025 and 2026 for Construction Law by The Best Lawyers in America®.

Parker has basic knowledge of Spanish.
