Insights: Publications

Permanent Injunction Not Overly Broad Where Plaintiff Would Not Enforce Injunction Against Noninfringing Uses

National Law Review, Volume VII, Number 10

JANUARY 10, 2017 Written by

The plain language of the permanent injunction is not overly broad where the injunction prevents the defendant from infringing the asserted patent under Federal Circuit law, and where the plaintiff asserts that it would not enforce the injunction against the defendant's noninfringing uses of the enjoined device.