"The bioeconomy has grown leaps and bounds in the past 10 years," said Digest editor Jim Lane, "and it is usually told as a story of technologies and Net Zero pledges — but it is individuals who actually translate opportunity into accomplishment, and the Bioeconomy 500 recognizes those individuals who played the leading part. Congratulations to all the winners and the friends who nominated, voted and campaigned for them."

All honorees will have the opportunity to attend the Advanced Bioeconomy Leadership Conference and take part in the ceremony celebrating those named to 2023 Bioeconomy 500, including a presentation of the official medals and ribbons.
