Chris Damitio focuses his practice on complex patent litigation matters across a wide range of industries. Chris has experience representing clients in high-stakes intellectual property disputes, including pre-litigation strategy, discovery, claim construction, and trial preparation. He works with a diverse set of clients, ranging from multinational corporations and groundbreaking startups to research institutions, in sectors such as technology, healthcare, consumer goods, and scientific innovation.

Chris is adept at analyzing patent portfolios, assisting in the development of litigation strategies, and supporting case teams to deliver effective solutions aligned with his clients' business objectives. He has played a key role in cases before federal district courts, the U.S. International Trade Commission, and the Patent Trial and Appeal Board, gaining valuable insight into the nuances of patent enforcement and defense.

While attending law school, Chris worked with the firm as a summer associate in 2020. He served as a judicial extern to the Honorable John C. Coughenour in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Washington where he drafted orders in cases involving sovereign immunity, attorney-client privilege in corporate settings, and international contract interpretation. During law school, Chris volunteered at the El Centro Homelessness Prevention Clinic where he conducted intake interviews and researched solutions for homeless clients facing legal issues. He also served as Staff Editor of the Journal of Environmental Law & Policy and won the 2021 Battle of the Experts National Mock Trial Competition.

While attending the University of Washington, Chris was captain and travel logistics director of the school's Mock Trial Team. He also worked as a legal assistant at a law firm in Edmonds, Washington where he researched changes in Washington State law regarding DUI test admissibility and expert phlebotomist testimony.
