Insights: Publications

The No-Fly List: The New Redress Procedures, Criminal Treatment, and the Blanket of ‘National Security’

Washington and Lee Journal of Civil Rights and Social Justice, Volume 23, Issue 1

SEPTEMBER 1, 2016 Written by

On September 11, 2001, the school day was interrupted when mothers and fathers suddenly arrived at Long Island schools to pick up their children. Parents pulled their unknowing children out of these schools—schools within a quick driving distance to Manhattan, New York—for reasons only communicated on the car ride home. I was one of these unknowing fourth graders who found out what happened upon arriving home.