Germany Trade and Invest

August 16, 2023

Water is the coal of the future. Meant Jules Verne as early as 1875. The writer certainly did not think about the decarbonization of the economy almost 150 years ago. But this is today's vision, which does not take a century and a half to implement. You can find out what needs to happen now, why for some experts the colours blue and grey definitely have no future and how German companies can benefit from the global hydrogen boom in the focus "Hydrogen: What you need to know now".
