What makes him a Power Player: Berlin has long led the law firm's largest office in the state, but his impact is perhaps most significant behind the scenes in catalytic projects such as 500 West Fifth and Whitaker Park in Winston-Salem. He is the lead attorney on the transformation of the former GMAC building into corporate space for Flow Cos. and as a hub for entrepreneurs through Winston Starts. He is also the general counsel for the Whitaker Park Development Authority, which has repositioned the former R.J. Reynolds campus. In addition to Cook Medical's plans to move its operations and 700 jobs there, Whitaker Park is now poised for a mixed-use apartment, hotel and retail project led by Chris Harrison.
